WORDS FROM WINE LISTER

After well over a year of disruption due to the global health crisis, fine wine is booming. Collectors took refuge in their cellars during lockdowns, and show no signs of curbing their appetite for wine with the resumption of “normal” life. As 2021 draws to a close, Wine Lister seeks to celebrate those wines and producers that appear flagbearers of a new and much-diversified fine wine era. Measuring wine performance within a series of categories, our Wine Lister Leagues and Indicators provide the ultimate wish list for those wines and producers achieving great strides in quality, increased popularity, most under the radar wines, and more.

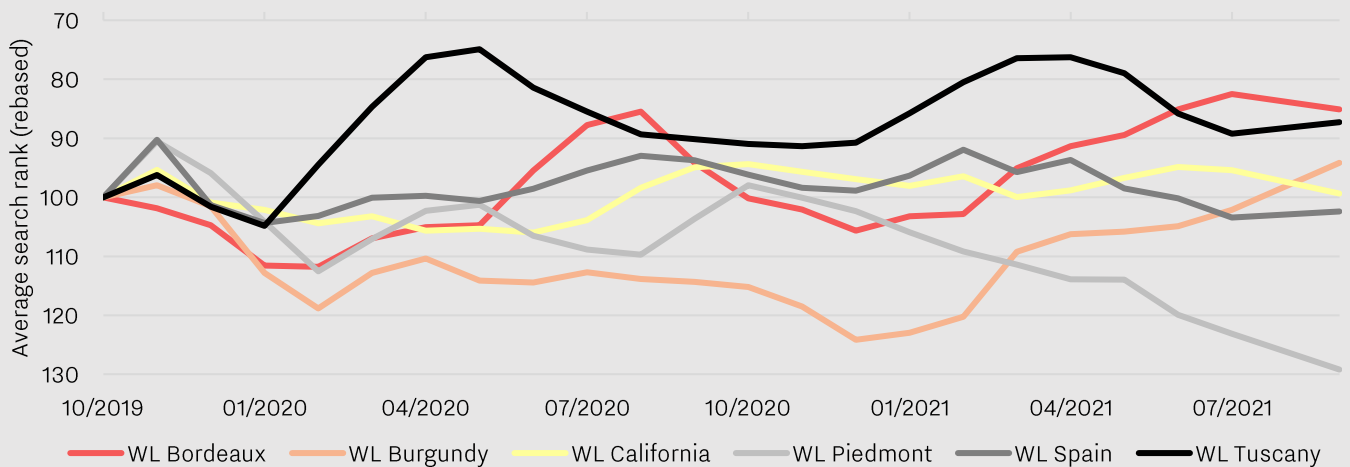

PRICE PERFORMANCE

We kick off this year's study by looking at the 10-year regional price performance of key fine wine regions. The price indices shown above comprise the top 20 wine brands by Wine Lister Pro score in each respective region.

- A region known for its investment staples, Burgundy leads the way long-term, up 207%, followed by distant second, Piedmont, up 138%. Bordeaux achieves the lowest price growth, up 32% over 10 years, just behind Spain at 42%
- The last 12 months show a positive rebound across all six regions, with every region achieving price growth between 3% and 14%

REGIONAL POPULARITY

We analyse above the average search rank of the same basket of top 20 wines per region:

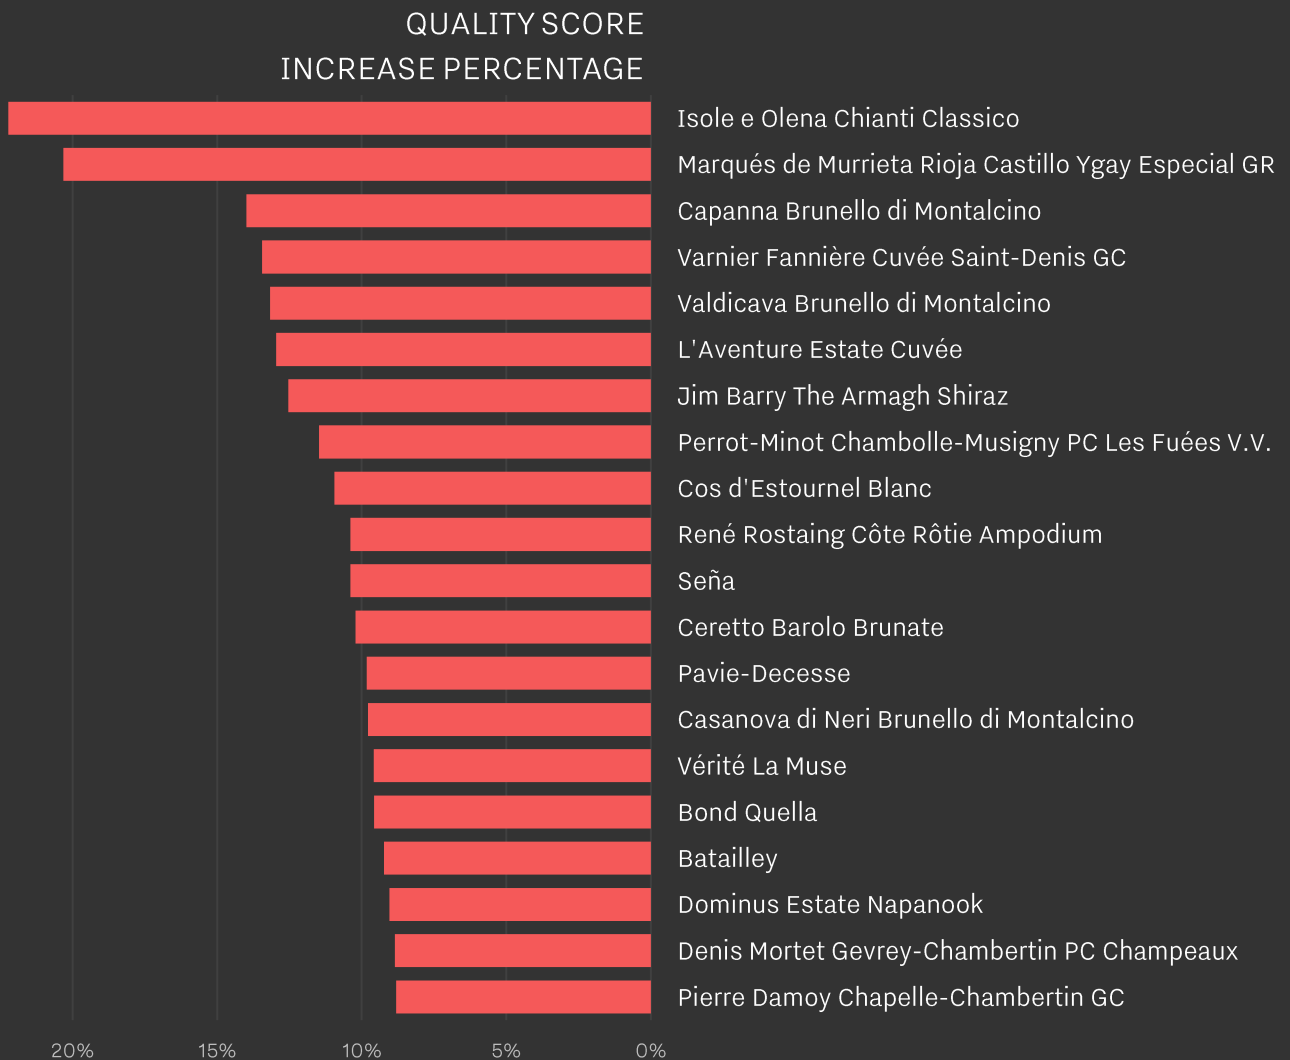

- Bordeaux and Tuscany, often compared to one another due to their high-profile juggernaut brands, have gained the most in popularity for their top wines, with Bordeaux notably recovering ground lost before the start of the coronavirus pandemic
- Meanwhile, Piedmont has lost its footing over the last year, likely as consumers were less excited about the region following the release of the sub-par 2017 vintage – though a reversal of fortunes may be on its way, with an anticipated 2018 vintage that could turn things around in the coming months

Our first League looks at the top 20 wines whose Quality score, based on our partner critics' ratings and drinking windows, has improved the most over the last two years, identifying which wines are on a rapid rise to the top.

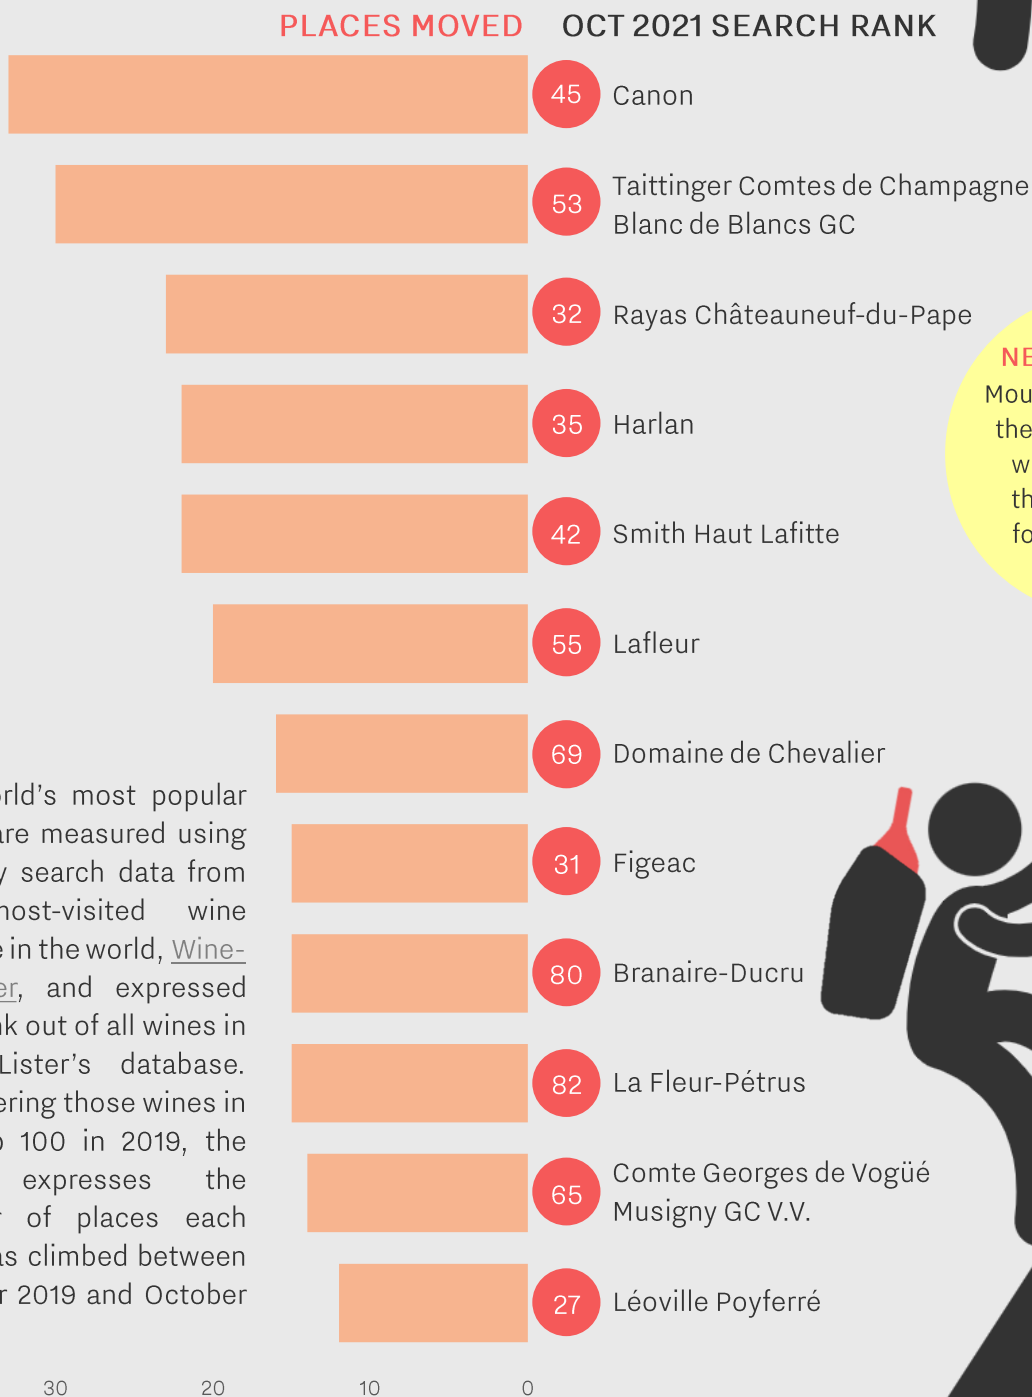

NEED TO KNOW:
Italy takes up five spots on the list, including three rapid risers from Brunello di Montalcino

QUALITY IMPROVERS

BIGGEST MOVERS

With the industry continuing its pivot towards digital solutions, and consumers becoming increasingly broad in their drinking interests, we examine below those top wines whose popularity has increased most in terms of online searches.

The world's most popular wines are measured using monthly search data from the most-visited wine website in the world, Wine-Searcher, and expressed as a rank out of all wines in Wine Lister's database. Considering those wines in the top 100 in 2019, the chart expresses the number of places each wine has climbed between October 2019 and October 2021.

NEED TO KNOW:
Mouton has remained the #1 most popular wine in the world throughout 2021, followed by Dom Pérignon

BIGGEST MOVERS

Given the number of cuvées across which a Burgundy producer's popularity is measured, Burgundy wines are often missed in top search rankings. Below we take a closer look at the top 20 Burgundian wines whose popularity has increased most in terms of online searches over the past two years, allowing us to recognise those hard-to-come-by cuvées that are most on the rise, out of the 5,245 wines in the Wine Lister database.

NEED TO KNOW:
A producer with notably increasing popularity, Arnoux-Lachaux occupies 10 spots in the list below

2021'S MOST COMPELLING WINES

For the sixth year running, we have carried out an in-depth survey with key fine wine trade players from across the globe. The 47 CEOs, MDs, and wine department heads we consulted run companies that between them represent well over one-third of global fine wine revenues.

This year we asked experts: “what are the most compelling wines and producers in the market today?”

Wine lovers are left with no shortage of options, with 188 wines and producers named, spanning more than 20 major regions. Based on these initial responses, Wine Lister has chosen to dig deeper, highlighting some of the most exciting, and most-named nominees. We also explore what factors contribute to a wine or producer being “compelling”, ultimately affirming that at the heart of fine wine, its quality, coupled with unique storytelling, are the aspects that set the world’s greatest wines apart.

OLD WORLD WINES TO WATCH

BIBI GRAETZ

Bibi Graetz receives the most mentions of any producer in our survey on the world's most compelling wines or producers. With an artist's spirit, Bibi Graetz produces bottles that are beautiful both for their labels and their contents. The Tuscan producer was chosen for quality, with one merchant noting the estate as "producing an increasingly excellent range of wines", as well as its commercial viability, with another noting it has "super visibility, thus organically creating very large demand, in a very short amount of time".

LES CARMES HAUT-BRION

A darling of the trade for several years now, Bordeaux's Les Carmes Haut-Brion's flame continues to burn bright – with its quality (and accompanying critics' scores) rapidly ascending in recent years, it is no wonder. However, the trade are also quick to recognise its recent investment, and particularly its focus on continuous improvement and innovation, as unique: one specialist merchant cites "the amount of experimentation Les Carmes Haut-Brion conduct" as a compelling factor in its own right.

ROBERTO VOERZIO

Known for meticulous work in his Piemontese vineyards, Roberto Voerzio's work in the winery is equally exacting, resulting in low-yield wines pure in expression. Considered a modernist, the winemaker eschews traditional tannin-heavy styles, yet also embraces some classicism, with little intervention, and a light hand in ageing, resulting in well-balanced wines that have increasingly earned cult status. One Australian merchant hails them "reference wines".

BERTHAUT-GERBET

At the helm since 2013, winemaker Amélie Berthaut is garnering increasing attention for her wines, following changes made at the Burgundy domaine on her arrival. Beyond cellar renovations, and combining the vineyards inherited from each side of the family under one title, she is also guiding the appellation of Fixin back into the limelight. Indeed, one specialist merchant notes the domaine as compelling for "over-hauling its rustic style and producing beautiful Fixin, and more."

FÜRST

Producing Pinot Noir in Burgstadt, Germany, Weingut Rudolf Fürst is recognised for its impressive elegance, created from meticulous, hand-worked vines and little intervention upon harvest. Though still below the radar of many, the estate holds great esteem amongst German wine lovers for its quality as much as its long-standing efforts to push German Pinot Noir to ever-greater heights.

NEW WORLD WINES TO WATCH

CATENA ZAPATA

Now in its fourth generation, this family winery is a longstanding icon of Argentinean wine, with special terroir matched by its micro-vinification approach in the winery. Though praise from critics for its strong quality is no new feat, respondents also note the winery's international presence and efforts to build relationships, with the trade and consumers alike, as key to its compelling nature, with one noting its "enormous engagement leads to strong presence and demand".

ERRAZURIZ

A giant amongst Chilean wine producers, Errazuriz recently celebrated its 150th anniversary. Though its portfolio includes some recognisable names produced from Bordeaux grape varieties (Seña, Viñedo Chadwick, Don Maximiano Founder's Reserve), the producer's abilities run deep, with multiple respondents specifically citing the Las Pizarras estate as compelling, with one noting its "really thrilling Pinot Noir and Chardonnay, as well as its exciting story".

PEDRO PARRA

Armed with a degree in terroir, Pedro Parra has been an increasingly common name to overhear in the wine world, as he traversed the hemispheres working as a wine consultant. Now focussed on a personal project in home region of Itata, Chile, Parra embraces grape variety diversity, dry farming, and 100-year old bush vines in his vineyards. His eponymous wine range reflects his enthusiasm for the land, and vision of extreme terroir dedication.

RHYS VINEYARDS

After a painstaking search for unique vineyard sites in California's Santa Cruz Mountains, Rhys is regarded for its dedication to excellence. Now with seven estate vineyards, the diligent search for the right terroir is matched by rigour and precision in the vineyard and winery. Broadly identified as a compelling producer, two respondents advise the exceptional Horseshoe Vineyard Pinot Noir and Chardonnay as standouts.

RIDGE VINEYARDS

Ridge is also making special wines in the Santa Cruz Mountains, focusing on Cabernet Sauvignon and Zinfandel. Celebrating its 60th anniversary in 2022, the trade's enthusiasm is only growing with the passage of time, with one specialist merchant noting Ridge "never ceases to deliver", before specifying "a magnum of Monte Bello recently outperformed several first growths at dinner" – recalling its initial claim to fame following its success at the Judgment of Paris.

WHAT COMPELS US?

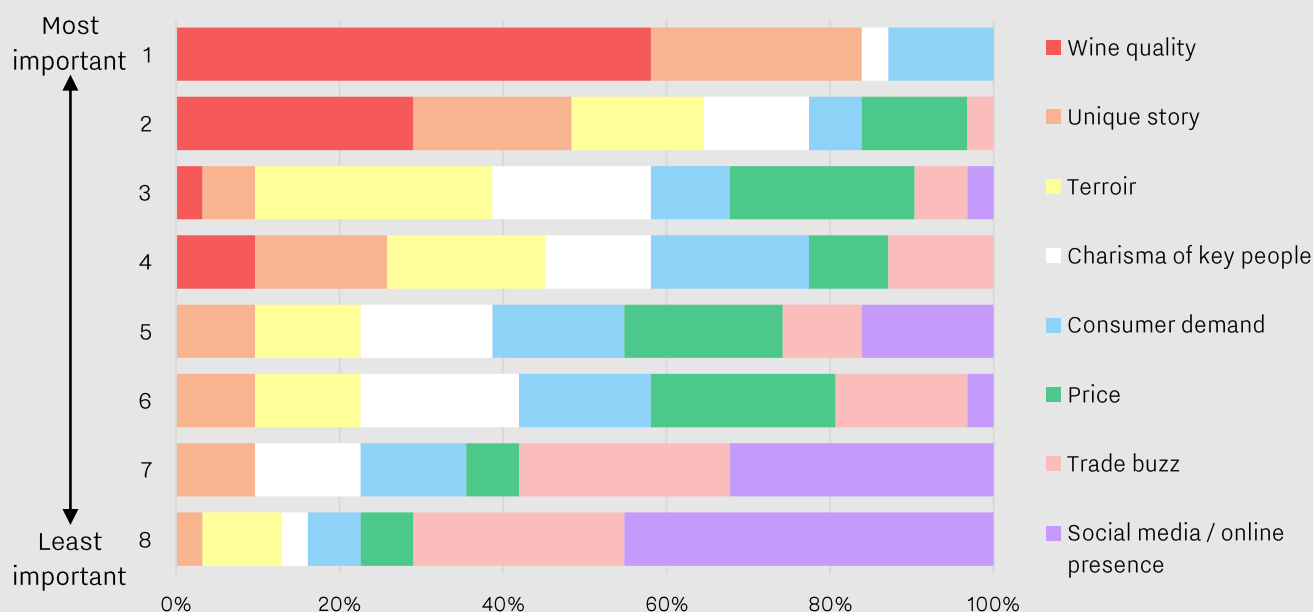

We asked our Founding Members “What factors are the most important today when considering how compelling a producer is? Please order the aspects shown below.” Here are their thoughts:

WINE QUALITY

Even the best marketing or communications efforts cannot change the essence of the liquid in bottle, and the trade remain ever in-tune with this truth: over 50% of respondents place wine quality as the most important factor when considering how compelling a producer is. One top tier UK merchant affirms “As much as the other factors must be included, we all know that these are entirely ancillary to how good the actual wine is”. Two others expand on wine quality to include consistency, with another top tier UK merchant noting that “Consistently high quality, particularly when faced with challenging conditions” is key. Some respondents also regard the future outlook of wine quality as important in their considerations, with one remarking “If a young producer makes substantial jumps in quality year-on-year in their early years, then it is someone to watch”.

UNIQUE STORY / CHARISMA OF KEY PEOPLE

Another 40% of respondents place emphasis on a producer’s story or charisma (with the remaining 10%, focused on business outcomes, naming consumer demand as the most compelling factor of a wine). This is echoed in multiple comments referencing “authenticity” as a particularly compelling aspect of a producer’s brand, with others specifying producer engagement as key to winning in a competitive landscape: one top tier Asian merchant notes “engagement, inclusiveness, humility, and lack of fanfare” as key, positive qualities.

SOCIAL MEDIA / ONLINE PRESENCE

Despite emphasis on storytelling, noted above, Wine Lister’s Founding Members do not feel that social media platforms are a particularly important aspect in creating a compelling brand, with nearly 50% placing it as least important, and another 30% placing it second-last. Instead, the trade appear to favour a more personal approach to brand promotion, with one Place de Bordeaux member noting that “engaging with trade and consumers in events around the world” is the most effective and desirable way to promote a brand – indicating face-to-face engagement cannot yet be replaced with virtual interactions.

TRADE BUZZ

Perhaps stemming from the ultimate supremacy of wine quality in determining what makes for a compelling producer, our Founding Members do not emphasise industry sentiment as influential when forming their opinions. Instead, they prefer to make up their own minds through direct experience.

INDICATORS

Wine Lister Indicators are designed to provide suggestions for specific buying purposes, whether it be to discover something new (Hidden Gems), drink well without breaking the bank (Value Picks), impress at a dinner party (Buzz Brands), or add to your investment portfolio (Investment Staples). They provide useful segments to help cut into Wine Lister's data, creating a ready-made source list of the best wines to meet your needs.

NEED TO KNOW:

With only 5,000 bottles produced each vintage, Tenuta di Petrolo's Bòggina C is the least-discovered, but joint-highest quality, of this year's Hidden Gems.

HIDDEN GEMS

The Hidden Gem indicator helps you discover fine wines that are under the radar, yet worth uncovering. These wines are seldom found in the top restaurants and are infrequently searched for online, but have high ratings from wine critics, or are assigned "Hidden Gem" status by the global fine wine trade. Below are Wine Lister's Top 10 new Hidden Gems for 2021 – check out our 2020 Hidden Gems here.
